Choosing a new primary care provider

Do any of these questions apply to you?

- Have you recently moved to a new city?
- Is your primary care provider retiring?
- Do you have general health concerns that require more care?
- Are you bilingual?

Your primary care provider helps maintain your overall health by focusing on preventive care.

What type of provider do you need?

The following are types of primary care providers:

- Family medicine or general practice: General practitioners treat a wide range of medical problems in age groups newborn to elderly. Family practitioners are similar to general practitioners, but have extra training to care for patients of all ages.
- Internal medicine: Internists focus on care for adults. Some internists receive more training to become specialists. For example, a neurologist is an internist who specializes in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases, such as multiple sclerosis, Alzheimer's disease, headaches, stroke or injury.
- Pediatrics: Pediatricians specialize in the care of children. This care typically begins at birth and continues until the age of 18.
- Geriatrics: Geriatricians are trained in family practice or internal medicine with extra training to care for older adults. Geriatricians specialize in conditions that are common with the aging process.

Primary care providers specialize in everyday health needs and help you reach your health care goals.

Your primary care provider coordinates the following care:

- Referrals to specialists
- Admission to a hospital or skilled nursing facility
